O. J. BARNES'

Selected Northern Grown Seeds for 1911.

---

Prices given in this catalogue are the prices ruling at this date, Nov. 25, 1910, and are subject to change without notice.

I shall, however, adhere as closely as possible to these prices, making no advances unless it is absolutely necessary. If large quantities are desired or a general list of seeds wanted, I shall be pleased to make special prices by mail.

I do not claim to compete in prices with some dealers or jobbers who obtain their stock of seeds from any source regardless of quality, but I do claim to sell the very best seeds that can be produced and that are suitable for the most critical trade. Cheap seeds should be shunned by all dealers who wish to build up a seed trade, and satisfy their customers. The best seeds which are possible to grow are the cheapest in the end.

Bags necessary for safe transportation are charged at cost.

In common with all reputable seed firms I offer and send out my seeds only under the following warranty.

I give no warranty, expressed or implied, as to description, purity or productiveness of the seeds I send out, and will not in any way be responsible for the crop.

O. J. BARNES, SEEDSMAN,

Nov. 25, 1910.

FARM SEEDS.

I make a specialty of handling the best High Bred Seed Corn in the United States. Some dealers are offering so-called Seed Corn which they claim is just as good as Barnes, at 20 to 25 cents per bushel less, and even in some cases 50 cents. Don't buy it. If you want cheap corn buy the elevator or milling corn, which is still less in price.

Lettuce.....	5-9	Squash.....	5-10
Muskmelon.....	5-10	Tomato.....	4-9

Seeds lose in vitality each year, some varieties much faster than others, and much depends upon the strength of vitality when seeds were harvested and how and where seeds are kept. Seeds kept to the limit of the above table in most cases would likely have very low or no vitality.

POULTRY.

In the future I intend to give more attention to the introduction of improved strains of Thoroughbred Stock of Poultry. The celebrated Dark Brahmas are now for sale in a limited way. My stock is of a strictly thoroughbred type. A few Cockerels and Pullets now for sale.

The special merits of the Dark Brahma is special hardiness of nature and great vigor of constitution, thereby enabling poultrymen to raise them for market without much care or difficulty. Another merit—large size, cocks weighing at maturity, when in good condition, from 10 to 12 lbs., hens when in good condition, 8 to 10 lbs.

As egg producers they are specially recommended, being the best in the Asiatic family. They feather rapidly when young, therefore they are ready earlier for market, as Spring chickens or broilers. The most desirable and special merit of this improved breed is their tame, domesticated nature, so much so they are not inclined to roam away from their homes, and therefore so little inclined to wander and fly away that they will hardly fly over a fence 4 feet high, hence are a great favorite with poultrymen.
